GERMAN OCCUPATION OF FRANCE COMPLETE

ALLIES 50 MILES FROM TUNIS

ALL France is occupied by German Armies, and every strategic position is defended by German aircraft, Panzers, artillery and anti-aircraft guns.

The naval base at Toulon remains in French hands, Vichy Radio announcing yesterday that the Germans had agreed not to occupy the port because the French naval chiefs would resist aggression; and Vichy will not be garrisoned by the Germans.

Marshal Pétain formally took command of all French forces.

While the long lines of tanks, armoured cars, artillery and lorries sped along the main highways to the coast, the French people remained calm, and no incidents were reported.

The French Cabinet met yesterday and issued a statement denouncing General Giraud, who was said to be co-operating with the Allied Army in North Africa. No statement of policy was announced, though it was emphasised that M. Laval had reported on the general situation in France and the French Empire.

In North Africa Allied troops occupied Bon, fifty miles from the Tunisian border. No fighting was reported from any other area, but a Vichy Radio message stated that Marakeesh was bombed violently, and the situation in North Africa had worsened and that the French Fleet had suffered severe losses.

NAVAL BASE NOT OCCUPIED

Vichy Radio announced to-day:—"As the chiefs of the French Navy have pledged themselves at Toulon to resist all aggression, the German authorities have decided that Toulon shall be a separate region. Toulon will not be occupied, and the French warships will be safeguarded.

"Berlin reports that anti-aircraft units have taken over all airfields and other strategic points in the south of France, and Marseilles, 30 miles from Toulon, has been occupied. The Luftwaffe is already moving in. On the other side of Toulon the Italians are thrusting west through Cannes."

According to Berlin, three Panzer divisions have now arrived on the French Mediterranean coast. Medium and heavy tanks are crossing the former demarcation line in a steady flow, followed by infantry and artillery. The German Radio says: "Hundreds of German aircraft fill the skies. Bombers of all kinds, including very heavy types, Junkers 52, transport 'planes, light bombers and fighters, are reported to be roaring over France day and night. All available trains have been commandeered by the German troops, and main line railway stations are crowded with soldiers."

PEOPLE CALM

"German troops are spreading out all along the French Mediterranean coast. People everywhere maintain an outward calm, despite their intense excitement, and no incidents have been reported. German troops have taken over control of France's frontiers with Switzerland and Spain. Switzerland is becoming increasingly concerned by the new developments, as her sole remaining passage with the outer world has now been severed. The National Zeitung reports that the Germans are reinforcing the barricades all along the frontier.

"Vichy will not be occupied by the Germans, Paris Radio announced to-night. Troops have only passed through the town.—(Reuter.)

MARSHAL COMMANDS

VICHY, Thursday.—The following communiqué was issued after a meeting of the Cabinet to-day:—"M. Laval informed the Government of the present situation in North Africa, and of all the conversations which he has had in connection with recent events. The Marshal and the Government have decided that by accepting from abroad the command of French elements in North Africa, General Giraud has broken his word, his honour and his duty as an officer. Neither troops, officials nor the population owe him obedience. The Marshal has personally taken over command of the armed forces, and his orders alone are valid."—(Reuter.)

SUPPLIES TO RUSSIA

WHAT BRITAIN HAS DONE

Mr. Richard Law (British Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Foreign Office) yesterday told the House of Commons that, by the Northern route alone, in the 12 months ending September or October, joint despatches by Britain and the United States to Russia covered aircraft, tanks, bulk cargo like shells, small arms ammunition, machines and machine tools, quantities of non-ferrous metals, composed of nickel and aluminium; foodstuffs and medical supplies. Aircraft for the period totalled 3,052 despatched, tanks 4,084, vehicles 30,031, miscellaneous cargo, machine tools, metals, etc., 831,000 tons. In addition, there were delivered 42,000 tons of aviation spirit and petrol, and 66,000 tons of fuel oil.

When you consider how we could have used so readily so much of that material in various other theatres of war, he added, and how little we had here at home, you will realise that there is really very little need for us to feel humiliated about what we have done for Russia.

These figures apply to the amounts despatched, not the amounts delivered, but the great bulk reached their destination. The effort to get those supplies to Russia, which, on the whole, has been most successful, has not been made without cost, and has demanded from our seamen the most terrific, and, indeed, heroic feats of endurance.

JAPANESE SHIPS SUNK

WASHINGTON, Thursday—Seven Japanese vessels have been sunk, and a Japanese destroyer probably sunk, in the Far East, says a Navy Department communiqué to-night. United States submarines, the communiqué says, reported these successes: Sunk—One transport, one tanker, three cargo ships, an auxiliary, a patrol vessel, and a destroyer damaged and believed sunk.—(Reuter.)

NEWRY SHOOTING CHARGE

John Benedict O'Connell, of Listowel, was discharged without any further evidence being offered, when, at Newry yesterday, he was charged with others, not in custody, with attempting to shoot Sergeant Young and Constable Flanagan, members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, on September 2nd. The police were on Customs duty at the time. Following a car with a number of men on it, they were fired upon.

EIRE WORKERS IN THE NORTH

MR. ANDREWS'S SPEECH

"I FEEL confident that we were never in as strong a position as we are at the present time," said Mr. Andrews, Premier of Northern Ireland, addressing the County Down Grand Orange Lodge yesterday.

"In Great Britain, throughout the Empire, and in America," he continued, "those who some years ago were very doubtful friends are now with us heart and soul, because it is now realised that we have done right in preserving this part of the Kingdom from the fate of falling into an All-Ireland Republic. Our allies everywhere also realise that Ulster Loyalists were right."

Speaking of the influx of people from Eire, Mr. Andrews said that it had been a difficult problem to deal with, but an arrangement had been entered into with the British Government whereby no one would be permitted to come for more than a very short time unless his services were required to help the war effort. Furthermore, after the war, those who had been permitted to enter Northern Ireland would be obliged to return to Eire in order that room in employment might be made for Ulster men who served in the Forces of the Crown. This new arrangement is to be retrospective, and it was to apply on January 1, 1940.

"You need have no fear that we, the Loyalists of Ulster, are going to be swamped, as some people have been predicting. The Government will see that does not occur," said Mr. Andrews.

POST-WAR BUILDING

SURVEY OF RESOURCES

Preparations are being made by the National Council of the Building industry to carry out a survey of the native resources which would be available, or which might be developed to meet the demands of the building and constructional industry after the war.

Plans for the survey still are in the preliminary stages, but the object will be to ascertain the extent to which the industry may be self-supporting within the limit of the country's resources, having regard to the likelihood that little or no imported materials will be obtainable for a considerable period after actual hostilities have ended owing to reconstruction demands in other countries.

Initial investigation will concern mainly such commodities as bricks, slates, lime, stone, and timber. A somewhat similar survey was carried out by the trade after the last war, and a small section was devoted in the National Museum to native products which could be developed for the assistance of the building industry.

U.S. NAVAL CASUALTIES

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—The total United States naval casualties in the second half of October was 728, the Navy Department announces. Of this, 172 were listed as dead, 315 as wounded and 241 missing, bringing the total number of casualties among U.S. Navy, Marine Corps and coastguards since Pearl Harbour to 16,526, of whom 4,625 men were listed as dead, 1,905 as wounded and 9,996 as missing.—(Reuter.)

JAPANESE 'PLANES DOWN

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—Twenty-two Japanese 'planes have been shot down in Guadalcanal for the loss of seven U.S. machines, said a U.S. Navy Communiqué to-day.—(Reuter.)

PROPOSED VISIT TO MR. GANDHI

PERMISSION REFUSED

A communiqué, issued yesterday, explained the Viceroy's refusal to permit Mr. Rajagopalachariar, former Congress Premier of Madras, to visit Mr. Gandhi, says a Reuter telegram from Bombay. Mr. Rajagopalachariar, it is stated, explained his endeavours to find a political solution, and asked permission to interview Mr. Gandhi regarding them. He made it clear that he did not represent any party or organisation, and could speak only for himself.

He was unable to produce any evidence of complete support for his proposals, added the communiqué, which continued: "The Governor-General is most anxious at all times to further all reasonable efforts to achieve a settlement, and has made his attitude clear to Mr. Rajagopalachariar." But he added that the attitude of Congress leaders appeared to remain entirely unchanged. "There has been no expression of regret for the policy that had, over the last three months, provoked so much violence, crime, bloodshed, and no sign of any change of heart."

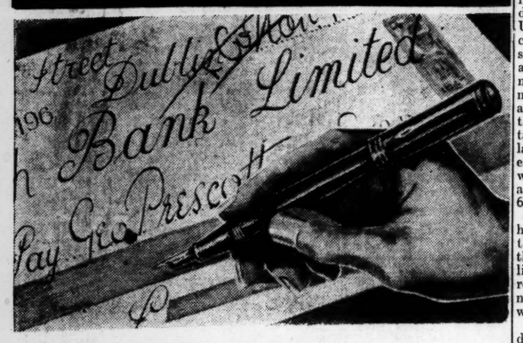
Mr. Rajagopalachariar afterwards expressed surprise at the Viceroy's attitude.

TRIPLETS

Triplets, all girls, were born to Mrs. Mary Smith, of 37 Mount Pleasant Villas, Ranelagh, at the National Maternity Hospital, Dublin, on Tuesday last. One of the babies died at 6 p.m that evening, but the mother and the remaining two are progressing favourably.

Mrs. Smith, who is the wife of an unemployed labourer, was visited yesterday by the Lord Mayor, Alderman P. S. Doyle, T.D., who chatted with her for some time and presented her with a gift of £5.

The Best Investment in the World



THIS cheque is not being exchanged for some fabulous treasure of art, for some rare luxury exclusive to the wealthy or for a partnership in some vast international enterprise. Though it is the best investment in the world, its cash equivalent is small and within the reach of all who can rightly assess permanent values. It entitles ownership to that most priceless possession of all: GOOD SIGHT.

IT might seem trite to remark that without GOOD SIGHT nearly all sources of pleasure are closed, but so many persistently neglect the care of their sight that it cannot be overemphasised. Once lost no amount of money can compensate for or retrieve this most essential and precious of the senses. Yet, to rectify defective conditions of vision in their primary phases or ensure normal sight for the future, incurs only a moderate outlay.

IT has always been PRESCOTTS policy to offer a first-class optical service at moderate cost. Practitioners in the most advanced developments of research, they use the most scientific equipment in the world, and are noted for the accuracy and skill of their diagnosis and prescriptions. Remember, while your sight cannot be assessed in terms of money, economy in expenditure is still wise—provided you are taking advantage of the most comprehensive service obtainable. PRESCOTTS, who can give you both economy and satisfaction, would be glad to advise you on the condition of your eyes. Phone 72506 for an appointment to-day.

CLOTHES RATIONING

The Minister for Supplies announces that, with effect from to-day, 6-ply yarn for use in the manufacture of rugs or carpets by hand will be exempt from rationing.

As from to-day also certain descriptions of printed furnishing fabrics, weighing less than 7 ozs. to the square yard, will be reduced in coupon value. The new values for these fabrics will be 1 coupon per 5 linear yards, or part thereof, irrespective of the width of the material.

RUSSIANS ATTACK IN CAUCASUS

BATTLES IN SNOW IN STALINGRAD

REUTER'S Moscow Correspondent said yesterday that Russian troops, striking hard at both ends of the Caucasus front, had scored successes at Novorossisk and Nalchik, and that the latest messages from the Black Sea coast reported that the Red Army was advancing in the Novorossisk area, where the Germans were on the defensive.

"The Germans are now being forced to fight in the Tuapse sector, with a strong Russian force in their rear," says the correspondent, adding:—"In the Nalchik area Germans are also having serious trouble. After storming forward into the narrow upper Terek valley they now find themselves in a dangerous bottleneck, with Russian reinforcements pouring in every day. On this front, where real winter is setting in rapidly, 100 German tanks have been cut off and are now in a dangerous position. They are without fuel and are feverishly being dug in to act as strong points. The German Command is drafting in every man they can.

"Inside the City of Stalingrad the Germans have been fought to a complete standstill. The Russian lines are stabilised in the factory suburbs and the Germans are hastily digging themselves in for the winter. Only artillery duels and patrol skirmishes are taking place in the streets, over which a thin mantle of snow has already fallen. To the north-west Marshal Timoshenko is continuing to mass men and materials in preparation for a great offensive."

LONDON, Thursday.—An attempt by the Stalingrad garrison to break through to the Red October Works was reported by the German News Agency to-night. German shock troops are stated to have improved their positions in the industrial quarter after violent hand-to-hand fighting.—(Reuter.)

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

MOSCOW, Thursday.—To-night's Soviet communiqué says: "During November 12 our troops fought the enemy in the areas of Stalingrad, north-east of Tuapse and south-east of Nalchik. In Stalingrad the defenders of the city repelled numerous enemy attacks. In one sector the Germans, having sustained heavy losses, succeeded in driving a wedge between 100 and 200 yards into the Soviet defence. In the northern sector of the city Soviet troops launched a counter-attack, and drove the enemy back 400 yards.

"North-west of Stalingrad Soviet detachments drove the Germans from a number of houses.

"South-east of Nalchik the enemy was driven out of two inhabited localities."—(Reuter.)

"T.B." IN CATTLE

"MISLEADING FIGURES"

"We welcome informed publicity on the question of cattle diseases in this country, because the cattle trade is the life-blood of the country," said Lieutenant-Colonel A. G. Doherty, Secretary of the Veterinary Medical Association of Ireland, yesterday, commenting on the latest statements about tuberculosis in cattle. "But," he added, "the figures given by Dr. Hannigan are misleading, because they have been taken out of their proper context."

He went on to say that the figure of 32 per cent. infection among 68,618 cows slaughtered in Dublin Abattoir over a period of eleven years should not be taken as applying to the whole cattle population. Neither should the figure of 40 per cent. among certain cattle examined in England. Both these figures relate to dairy cattle—in the abattoir case the cows in question are those which have finished their period of economic use in dairies.

It was natural to find a higher percentage of infection among dairy cattle, which spent most of their lives under housed conditions, than in cattle which were on open grazing. But it was well known that the percentage of infected cattle which secreted tubercular bacilli in their milk was very small. It was difficult to obtain accurate figures, but it was generally estimated at one per cent.

Colonel Doherty added that the Council of the Veterinary Medical Association was at present considering schemes for the control of this and other diseases in cattle.

AIR TERMINUS CHANGED

Aer Lingus Tta (Irish Air Lines) give notice that their terminus in Great Britain will be changed on Monday next, 16th November, 1942, from the existing terminus at Barton Airport, Manchester, to Speke Airport, Liverpool. The passenger facilities at Speke Airport are much superior to those at present existing at Barton.

POPE TO SCIENTISTS

SHIP BUILT IN UNDER FIVE DAYS

A Reuter telegram from a United States West Coast port yesterday said:—

The Kaiser shipyard is launching a 10,500-ton "Liberty" freighter to-day, four days 15½ hours after the keel was laid. The previous record for freighter-building was ten days.

LIMERICK BISHOP NOT ELECTED

THE HOUSE TO APPOINT

AS no candidate received 21 clerical and 35 lay votes required to elect a Bishop of Limerick to succeed the Right Rev. Dr. C. K. Irwin, translated to Down and Connor, the appointment went to the House of Bishops from yesterday's meeting of the Diocesan Synod of Limerick, Ardfert and Aghadoe. On the third vote, the Rev. Canon E. C. Hodges, Principal, Church of Ireland Training College, Dublin, received 15 clerical and 34 lay votes. The Very Rev. R. C. H. Elliott, Dean of Down, received 11 clerical and 17 lay votes.

The election was presided over by the Most Rev. A. W. Barton, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin, and there was a large attendance of both clerical and lay voters.

Referring to the new system of election in his address to the Synod, the Archbishop said: "A weak point to which I draw public attention is the hardship imposed on those men whose names have been placed on the select list for a considerable time. Their names are before the public and discussed in trains and tramcars. Some of the uninformed public seem to take it for granted that these clergymen have put forward their own names as candidates for a bishopric. We know that this is quite inaccurate. They are not consulted on the matter. Once their names are on the select list they have not the power to withdraw them." An advantage of the new system was that it eliminated protracted elections, and it was no longer possible to have a large variety of possible, and sometimes impossible, candidates in first-round voting

"HOUR OF OFFENSIVE HAS COME"

GENERAL SMUTS ON AFRICA

Field Marshal Smuts said yesterday in London: "The hour of the offensive has come with a vengeance, suddenly, swiftly, decisively. Soon the whole of North Africa, from the Nile to the Atlantic, will be in Allied hands. It is the most amazing transformation in the shortest possible time that we have seen in this war. The change has come sooner and more decisively than we had foreseen, and it may be only the beginning.

"The possibilities become tremendous, and these Middle East and North African victories have, therefore, a significance far beyond their present proportions, great and spectacular as they are. Perhaps the important new thing in the war may come from Africa, for he who holds the Mediterranean may hold the key to Europe, and who knows whether another Carthage will not yet avenge itself against a recreant Rome?"

Speaking of the U-boat menace, he said: "An organised attack on this deadly menace with all our available resources must surely prove as effective now as it did twenty-five years ago, and such an attack I urge with all earnestness."

STRABANE TEACHER'S DISMISSAL

SPECIAL MEETING CALLED

There has been a further development in the case of Mr. Thomas J. Carroll, Principal of the Strabane Technical School, who was dismissed from this position by the Unionist members of the Strabane and Castlederg Regional Education Committee, for what was termed by Mr. J. F. Gamble, M.P., the proposer of the resolution of dismissal, with three months' notice, as an insulting and impertinent letter which Mr. Carroll had written to the previous meeting on the demand for an Irish language class in Strabane Technical School day and night courses. On the same occasion as the dismissal of Mr. Carroll, the unanimous recommendation of the Committee of Management of the Strabane Technical School that an Irish class be established and a teacher appointed was rejected, the Nationalist members of the Regional Committee resigning their membership and walking out of the meeting. Now a special meeting of the committee has been summoned for Saturday next for the purpose of considering a communication from the Ministry of Education in regard to Mr. T. J. Carroll and deciding on a reply thereto.

THE DONNYCARNEY SHOOTING CASE

SENTENCE CARRIED OUT

Maurice O'Neill (26), a farmer's son, of Caherciveen, Co. Kerry, was executed yesterday morning, in accordance with the sentence passed on him by the Military Court last week, for having fired at three members of the Garda Siochana with intention to prevent his own arrest and the arrest of another man not in custody. The shooting at the police took place at Donnycarney, Dublin, on October 24th.

ANOTHER MOROCCAN TOWN TAKEN

BRITISH SHIPS LAND U.S. TROOPS

THE Allies' new offensive advanced a further stage yesterday with a Vichy report that British ships have landed large numbers of American troops at Bone, the Algerian coastal town, only 50 odd miles from the Tunisian border.

VICHY, Thursday.—Bons, 50 miles west of the Tunisian border, was occupied this morning by American forces landed from British ships, states an Algiers dispatch. At 6.30 to-night, the report adds, Constantine had not been approached by the Allied forces.—(Reuter.)

LONDON, Thursday.—Allied fighters from Malta, in two waves, to-day struck the first blow in the Allies' Tunisian campaign. While British and American troops were streaming along Algerian roads towards Tunisia, the fighters attacked the El Aulina aerodrome, outside the capital, says Reuter. At least 19 'planes were smashed by cannon and machine-gun fire. Besides these about an equal number are known to have been damaged. There is no further news of land operations. American troops, believed to be accompanied by units of the British First Army, were last reported to be 100 miles from the Tunisian frontier, and moving rapidly east. Vichy Radio said to-day that no land or sea attacks had been made against the protectorate so far.—(Reuter.)

Only isolated pockets of resistance remain in North Africa, said a United States War Department communiqué to-night.—(Reuter.)

"SITUATION WORSE"

LONDON, Thursday.—Vichy Radio reported to-night: "The situation in North Africa has worsened. A great part of the French Fleet has suffered severe losses. The Jean Bart has been put out of action." The Moroccan town of Marrakesh had been bombed violently, the radio added.—(A.P.)

German Radio claimed to-night: "Over 200,000 tons of the Allied transport fleet off the North African coast has been sunk, seriously damaged, or put out of action by Axis naval and air formations. Among the transports sunk or seriously damaged are several big passenger liners."—(Reuter.)

FLEET OF GLIDERS

ZURICH, Thursday—A considerable fleet of gliders, towed by bombers and transport 'planes, has passed down the coast of Portugal, heading south, says a Lisbon report to-day. The sight of this armada, combined with the statement by Allied Headquarters, North Africa, that American parachute troops were flown from Britain to Oran in transport 'planes last week-end, has caused speculation in Lisbon.—(Reuter.)

THE GERMANS KNEW

WASHINGTON, Thursday — Mr. Stimson, U.S. War Secretary, said to-day that the Germans had advanced knowledge of Allied operations in North Africa. They evidently knew something of the sort was afoot when the attack force started off, he said. "There was a large concentration of Axis submarines in the waters through which it had to go, but, despite this, only one transport was sunk out of a group of ships estimated at 850," he added.—(Reuter.)

THE COMMUNIQUES

LONDON, Thursday.—The British communiqué from Cairo said: "On Tuesday our twin-engined fighters attacked an aerodrome near Tunis. At least 19 Axis aircraft were set on fire and many again damaged. The bombing of Sardinian aerodromes was continued."

The Italian communiqué said: "Italian air formations successfully renewed their attacks against enemy naval forces off the French North African coasts. An aircraft-carrier and two ships of large tonnage were hit by torpedoes. To the north of Cape Bon (north-eastern point of Tunisia) one of our reconnaissance 'planes in an encounter with two enemy fighters destroyed one of them. In the Eastern Mediterranean a British destroyer was hit by our torpedo-carrying 'planes and was seen to sink. Night attacks were carried out against the aerodromes at Malta. From the last two days' operations two of our 'planes are missing."

The German communiqué said: "In day and night attacks against American and British naval units off Algiers one aircraft carrier, one cruiser and one large merchantman were hit by the Luftwaffe with heavy calibre bombs. The harbour of Algiers, as well as an enemy aerodrome with numerous grounded 'planes near the city, was the target of other bombing raids. In the Bay of Bougie two transports, totalling 16,000 tons, were sunk, and 12 large freighters and liners were damaged in air attacks carried out in waves."

AFTER-WAR PLANNING

EAST'S GREAT PART

Replying to the resumed debate on the Address in the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Richard Law, Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Foreign Office, spoke of the successes of the Army, which was only now reaping the reward it earned long ago. The whole of mankind, he said, was beginning to look to the future anxiously and hopefully, and "beginning confidently to expect our victory."

Of blue-prints for the future, he said, the Foreign Secretary preferred to develop in the heat of the battle an organic structure which would have been fused and tested and fitted together in the heat of experience of war. "It is better than building a shining palace which is founded only on a sense of hopes which have never yet been fulfilled."

Co-operation between the Soviet, the United States and Britain did not mean that other States would not have their freedom, and the possibility of developing in their own way; but it did mean that "we would not once again find ourselves, first in difficulties and then in chaos in Europe, because there was no understanding between these three great Powers."

We could not foretell whether the United Nations would conduct some kind of a regional organisation in the Far East, where China had a great part to play, but the negotiations for the abolition of extra-territorial rights in China was a shining example of Anglo-American co-operation. "The United Nations are nearly completely integrated now—pooling resources, valour, shipping, colonial resources. I hope it will continue after the war."

Mr. Greenwood (Labour), stressing the need for clear ideas and definite proposals for the future, said that "this war would not be well won unless the peace was well won also."

Mr. Ivor Thomas (Labour) said that there was no doubt among the troops that the chief architect of the recent great victories was the Prime Minister himself.

BANGOR MAN ALLEGES CONTEMPT

APPLICATION REFUSED

A Divisional Court, consisting of the Lord Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Brown and Mr. Justice Megaw, in Belfast yesterday, refused an application by Arthur J. Dale, Bangor, amusement caterer, for a writ of attachment for contempt of Court against Walter Malcolm, Mayor of Bangor, and Charles F. Milligan, a Bangor councillor.

For the applicant it was stated that he kept slot machines for public amusement; that he was prosecuted in July last for keeping a common gaming house, was convicted, and lodged an appeal. Before the appeal was heard, according to a local newspaper, Councillor Milligan said at a meeting of the Borough Council that thanks were due to the police for the energetic manner in which they had proceeded in the prosecution, and Councillor Malcolm said it was against the interests of children to allow them to be exploited by inducing them to part with a penny to get more.

Counsel for respondents said that Dale was not the only person fined by the magistrate.

Councillors Malcolm and Milligan said in evidence that at the time of the meeting they were not aware that Dale had lodged an appeal.

DEFACED NUMBERS ON BICYCLES

NEW SYSTEM OF DETECTION

A special system of applying etching solution to the frame of a bicycle in order to expose the fact that its serial number had been altered or defaced by filing was described by Superintendent Stapleton at the Circuit Criminal Court yesterday when Robert Fitzsimons, a cycle dealer, of Lower Buckingham street, Dublin, was found guilty of receiving between July and September, 1941, four bicycles knowing them to be stolen, and was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment with hard labour.

Mr. G. Murnaghan (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor), prosecuting, said that the existence of receivers of stolen bicycles accounted for the fact that so many bicycles are being stolen these days.

VALUABLE OILS LOST

"A SHOCKING WASTE"

Because of the lack of transport and inability to secure processing plant, many hundreds of tons of material capable of producing valuable animal oils and organic fertilisers, are being wasted every year in the twenty-six counties.

In abattoirs in many parts of the country large quantities of meat which are condemned as unfit for human consumption, are destroyed or simply buried, and, at a recent meeting of the Limerick Corporation, when it was suggested that the city's condemned meat should be used for the production of grease and oil, the City Manager stated that they had no means of commercialising condemned carcases.

With killings increased, owing to the demands of the canning industry, up to about 2,700 cattle per week, the Dublin Abattoir disposes of over a thousand tons of diseased meat each year to organic manure manufacturers, who subject it to a very high temperature and pressure for the elimination of disease organisms before applying manufacturing processes for the production of inedible tallow and bone manures, and meat meal for mixing with grain as pig feeding stuff. The production of animal oils helps to maintain the present soap ration.

"In the provinces this valuable material is being thrown away every day," a veterinary official commented. "It is a shocking waste in war-time, and the whole problem of saving these by-products needs to be treated on a national basis."

INTERNEES IN DERRY

MORE BELFAST TRANSFERS

Almost unnoticed, a second batch, believed to number over 200, of the 400 internees in Belfast were transferred yesterday from the Crumlin Road Jail to Derry Prison. Some 140 others were similarly transferred over three weeks ago, and it is believed that Derry Prison will eventually become the "home" of all these political offenders. The transfer has been necessitated by overcrowding in Belfast.

Nobody in Derry outside the prison authorities and the police were aware of the transfer. The men, with their escort—several tender loads of armed R.U.C.—left Belfast at a very early hour, and arrived at Derry shortly before daybreak. Handcuffed in couples, they were conveyed in covered lorries.

THE CENTRAL BANK

MAY FUNCTION IN JANUARY

By Our Political Correspondent.

ALTHOUGH the Central Bank Act has now received the signature of the President it will not begin to operate until the Minister for Finance fixes the "appointed day," as required by Section 3. It is generally believed that the date will probably be January 1st next.

The first step will be the appointment of the members of the Board of Directors, consisting of a Governor, two Service directors (that is, civil servants), three representing the Associated Banks, and three others to be nominated by the Minister.

It is generally accepted that the first Governor of the new Bank will be the present Chairman of the Currency Commission, Mr. Joseph Brennan, and that one of the Service directors will be Mr. J. J. McElligott, who is also a member of the Currency Commission. The names of several other prominent members of the Civil Service are mentioned as likely candidates for the other appointments, but the final decision will in all cases remain with the Minister.

BANKS' NOMINEES

No approach has yet been made to the Standing Committee of the Associated Banks to nominate their representatives. The Minister shall invite the Associated Banks to meet at an appointed place to select a panel of their members of six and from this panel the Minister will select the three who will represent the banks on the directorate. The Minister may appoint three other members from time to time as he may himself determine.

On the appointed day the Currency Commission as it at present exists will become dissolved and its members cease to hold office, but they will not thereby be debarred from appointment as governor or director of the bank. Section 15, which makes this provision, also provides that employés of the Commission will be automatically transferred to the service of the Bank in the same capacity, and with the same tenure of office and remuneration as they then held.

It is not anticipated that during the early days of the Bank's existence any considerable increase will be necessary in the staff, but as its work develops it is not improbable that experienced banking officials may be called in. In this connection Section 16 of the Act requires that appointments shall be made by competition, with a qualifying test in the Irish language.

BORDER PROBLEM

DR. LITTLE ON SPIES

Dr. Little (Conservative, Down), in the House of Commons yesterday, complained of "spying on the border between Eire and Northern Ireland." It was ridiculous, he said, that there should be an open door. It was a grave mistake to allow people to cross the border without an identity card. Everyone creasing the border should have a permit with a photograph on it. He asked the Home Secretary to face the border question squarely, and deal with it in such a way that it would no longer be "an obstruction to our war effort and a positive danger to the United Kingdom."

General Sikorski, the Polish Prime Minister, and General Smuts met yesterday, and discussed at some length the position of the war and political events.

DRESS WEAR with an air...

Nobody talks about what men wear at dances in the same way as they discuss the girls' frocks. But that doesn't mean that they don't take notice. Nothing can make—or mar—a man's reputation for being well-dressed so much as his dress clothes. Which is why so many particular men come to Seale's—they've been tailors to well-dressed men since 1857. If you get your dress wear at Seale's it will be right—precisely and exactly.

BILLIARDS FIXTURES

The following fixtures were arranged at the annual meeting of the Irish Amateur Billiards Association:—

Irish Open Snooker Championship (Barwatt Cup)—November 23rd. Irish Amateur Billiards and Snooker Championships (Association's trophies)—January 23rd to February 7th, 1943. All-Ireland Championships, Billiards and Snooker (McAleevey and Burke Cups)—March 27th, 1943. Boys' Billiards and Snooker Championships to be fixed later.

The following entries have been received for the Open Snooker Championship:—P. Fenning, P. O'Connor, L. Redmond, M. Nolan, F. Cullen and B. Doyle. With this number of entries, the event will be run on the points system, "in which every win will mean each other once. This is likely to prove a very attractive competition.

Inter-City Rugby Games

BY OUR RUGBY FOOTBALL CORRESPONDENT.

THERE will be two inter-city matches in to-morrow's club programme, Dublin University entertaining Instonians in College Park, while Wanderers travel to Belfast to meet North of Ireland, who have two victories over Dublin clubs to their credit already.

In view of injuries to Wanderers' players last Saturday, it looks as if North will notch yet another success against Southern rivals. Instonians will be paying their first visit to Dublin this season, and their game against Trinity should be interesting, with the University at full strength, but for W. J. Moynan in the pack.

Old Belvedere have K. and B. Quinn on the injured list and will have a reconstructed back division out against the improving U.C.D. XV. at Belfield.

Lansdowne and Blackrock will probably have a level struggle at Lansdowne road, both being rather deficient in scoring power. Bective, an extremely erratic side, should have the beating of Clontarf if they strike their best form, which has been very good.

The Old Wesley backs are likely to make matters rather too hot for the Palmerston defence, and St. Mary's also have an advantage behind the scrum over Monkstown, but in the generally levelling-up process which has been going on this season, the results in these two games may not work out as anticipated.

TEAMS

Monkstown—B. Bergin; T. Sugars, F. S. Ebbitt, W. Campbell, W. O'Connor; H. Morris, L. Craig; M. P. Aherne, J. W. Aherne, D. Ganly, P. Maloney, E. Lalor, E. Hart, A. Blackmore, H. Risk.

Old Wesley—G. England; J. O'Donnell, J. McConnell, J. K. White, F. R. Doyle; E. H. Carr, F. L. Wolfe; J. C. Speer, M. Glass, W. Shiel, S. H. Polden, M. S. C. Rooney, D. E. J. Glenn, J. H. McElroy, J. Sweetman.

Clontarf—M. B. Williams; O. Palcic, F. G. Moran, B. Mullen, D. Maloney; J. J. Mooney, J. Milroy; S. Fitzpatrick, B. Skehan, E. J. Lyons, H. H. Milroy, D. P. Madden, J. J. Guiney, J. O'Brien, C. Denvir.

U.C.D.—F. Keenan; K. O'Flanagan, M. Feddis, T. O'Sullivan, W. Dillon; A. McElhinney, J. Thompson; E. Hay, R. Magner, C. Murray, H. Dolan, A. Delaney, D. Hingerty, T. Halpenny, R. Soellman.

Palmerston — Redmond; Ellis, Potts, West, Melvin; Verso, Holmes; Burke, Merrey, Fine, Allen, Collen, Gill, Allen, Flynn.

Blackrock College—D. J. O'Brien; L. Hoffman, J. Ahearn, J. J. McNamee, C. Magnire; D. Nolan, J. C. Ferris; T. J. Kenny, F. H. Hogan, J. J. Meagher, F. G. Ryan, S. A. Morrison, K. J. Keenan, B. Russell, J. Wall.

Dublin University.—A. S. O'Connor; H. H. Robinson, D. O'R. Mayne, S. D. Walsh (capt.), K. Rutherford; K. McIntyre, H. de Lacy; W. J. Moynan, R. D. Moore, S. Barnes, J. A. Bradfield, S. N. Rutherford, G. F. Sayers, W. F. Skuce, R. B. Boland.

WEEK-END SOCCER PROGRAMME

The crashing of Cork United at Limerick last Sunday should act as a much-needed stimulus to the winning team, which has not met with the success which the standard of its football would merit. But that has been due, more than anything else, to a deplorable want of finish forward. Limerick's meeting with Drumcondra on Sunday at Tolka Park promises to be the best of the three week-end games in Dublin; but the visitors are aware that playing at home and at Tolka Park are totally different propositions.

The statement was published some weeks ago that Kevin O'Flanagan, the Leinster Rugby player, and Bohemian right wing forward, in order to get an occasional game on Sunday, contemplated throwing in his lot with another Dublin club, a suggestion which a couple of days later he described to the writer as "absolutely ridiculous."

Now we find him in the Bohemian team to oppose St. James's Gate at Iveagh Park on Sunday. What a pity it is that he and his brother, the left-winger, Michael, could not be induced to turn out more regularly for the amateurs, who so greatly need a little more "pep" in their attack, and a forward or two who can shoot as hard and straight as they do.

For their match with Shamrock Rovers on Sunday, Dundalk announce a few changes. From half-back, which position he always filled with much distinction, Donnelly is moved to inside-right to Barlowe; Grice resumes at left half-back, and Lavery comes on to the left with McDonald. The playing of Donnelly beside Barlowe should strengthen the right wing, but where the attack has recently been weakest is in the centre.

Shelbourne look good for the points at Shelbourne Park, where they come up against Bray Unknowns to-morrow, and at the Mardyke on Sunday Cork very likely will atone for last Sunday's lapse when they meet Brideville.

To-morrow (3.30)—Shelbourne v. Bray Unknowns, Shelbourne Park.

Sunday (3.30)—Drumcondra v. Limerick, Tolka Park; Dundalk v. Shamrock Rovers, Dundalk; St. James's Gate v. Bohemians, Crumlin; Cork United v. Brideville, Cork.

DUNDALK CASE STILL HANGS FIRE

The special meeting of the League of Ireland, held last night to consider Dundalk's application for financial assistance, was, on the motion of Mr. V. J. Rochfort (Bohemians), seconded by Mr. W. Hunter (Drumcondra), adjourned until next Wednesday, to enable Dundalk to submit a financial statement—revenue account and balance sheet—duly certified by professional auditors, from the end of the club's last financial season.

Mr. J. Devlin presented the case for Dundalk and stated that by comparison with last season they were £300 down. The directors had decided that the lowest figure the club would accept would be £180. He detailed various items of club expenditure, and stated that it cost them as much to get to Bray as it cost them to travel to Cork last year.

Mr. V. J. Rochfort (Bohemians) said that the Bohemians voted for Dundalk's application they would be voting against their amateur principles; but his club were most anxious to keep Dundalk in the game. He considered the matter was one for the governing body alone. The club got £1,900 last season (April-May); if they did not do so well this season they would be in a poor financial position at the end of it.

Mr. J. Byrne (Shamrock Rovers) said the other Dublin clubs wanted to know what had become of the money Dundalk received, and on Mr. Devlin explaining items regarding the cost for club trips, he was reminded by Mr. Rochfort that where there were other means of transport available teams could not engage taxis to bring them to football grounds.

Mr. F. J. Dowling remarked that it had been stated that Dundalk were holding a pisto' to the head of the League. It was not a pistol; it was an 18-pounder. What, he asked, was going to happen to the finances of the League if the application was acceded to? The League would go up in smoke.

After a lengthy discussion, the motion to adjourn was carried unanimously.

OPENING MEET OF THE GALWAY BLAZERS

A large crowd assembled on Monday in the old square at Athenry for the opening meet and to welcome Miss O'Rorke, the popular Master, who enters on her fourth season as Master of the Blazers. Frank Challenor, first whip and kennel huntsman, and Dan Clark, second whip, again turn hounds to her.

Young hounds have developed well during the cubbing season, and in Monday's great gallop they showed their mettle alongside the older hounds on a day of indifferent scent with a fox which ran down wind from near Ballydavid gorse to Little Knockroe—a point of six miles and more than twice that distance as hounds ran.

Our fox must have been disturbed from Fahy's gorse and ran as though for Ballydavid gorse, but crossing the railway he swung north over the mountain for Knockbarra, where he was viewed as he circled the covers. Hounds forced him out, and running for Roundfield he crossed the Belville-Moniven road and led us delightful country lying between Moniven and Mount Brown, and running midway between Ryehill and Carrowreagh he reached the high ground of the Knockroe hills and ran hounds out at Lisnasiska, after a hunt of two hours of most enjoyable hunting.

NEW PACK OF HARRIERS

In spite of the difficult times, a new pack of Harriers, entitled the "Little-grange Harriers," has been started by Mr. Frank Gradwell. It will hunt round Drogheda district and part of the country that the Louth Hounds are unable to cover in their fixtures. For one period Mr. Gradwell's grandfather, the late Mr. Frank Leland, founded a pack bearing this title, Littlegrange Harriers, so that it is not completely new.

Bankers B ..... 2 Trinity Ramblers 1

At Trinity—J. A. Mattsson (2+1) beat E. J. Furlong (-1), 9-4, 7-9, 9-7, 1-9, 9-2; R. B. Wellwood (2+2) beat W. R. E. Hackett (2+2) 9-5, 9-6, 9-6; H. A. Egan (2+2) lost to R. O. Lloyd (2+5), 7-9, 9-6, 6-9, 9-7, 8-10.

DUNDALK'S CHRISTMAS FIXTURES

The following are Dundalk's Christmas fixtures:—Dec. 25th, Shamrock Rovers (away); Dec. 26th, Shamrock Rovers (home); Dec. 28th, Cork United (away); Jan. 1st, Cork United (home).

PORTRANE MAY LOSE AGAIN

By P. D. MacWEENEY.

To-morrow's hockey matches will bring the first half of the Senior League A to an end with one match, Portrane v. St. James's Gate, remaining to be played. At the moment, Portrane have a lead of one point from St. James's Gate, Pembroke Wanderers and Railway Union, with Trinity and Y.M.C.A. a further point behind, but the leaders have a match in hand against four of these sides, so they are in a slightly stronger position than they would appear to be on paper.

It is possible that after to-morrow's matches six of the eight teams will all be on level terms with eight points each. If Trinity and Y.M.C.A. beat Portrane and Corinthians respectively, and the Wanderers-Railway and Three Rock Rovers-Gate matches are drawn, we will have that interesting situation, and these results are quite likely.

Portrane's run of success came to an end last Saturday when Pembroke Wanderers beat them deservedly, but only got the decider in the last five minutes.

So far Trinity have not come up to expectations, their half-back line being erratic, especially against Railway last week. Their middle line—which is normally good—strikes top form. Trinity have the pace to stand up to the fit Portrane team, and their forward line is more evenly balanced. With Stevenson and Lush reverting to their original positions at full-back and inside-left respectively, the University seem to stand a fair chance on their own ground, of victory.

Now that they have settled on a definite team, Railway are playing sound hockey, and there would appear to be nothing between themselves and Wanderers. The defences will almost certainly master the attacks at Serpentine avenue, and a draw is quite on the cards.

With R. Walker strengthening a weak spot in the forward line, Y.M.C.A., another side to show decided improvement on a poor start, should be fairly certain of the points against Corinthians, who have yet to register a victory. Three Rock Rovers are also looking for their first win, and they certainly showed their poorest form so far against Y.M.C.A. last Saturday. A considerable improvement in finishing off attacks will be necessary if they are to beat St. James's Gate at Londonbridge road.

FILLY HEADS TWO-YEAR-OLD HANDICAPS

For the second year in succession, Mr. Fawcett, the official handicapper to the Jockey Club, has placed a filly at the top of his handicap for two-year-olds. This is Mr. M. H. Benson's Lady Sybil, who won six out of her seven races last season. The weights of the leading two-year-olds are:—

Lady Sybil, 9-7; Nasrullah, 9-6; Umiddad, 9-5; Ribbon, 9-3; Straight Deal, 9-1; Fortunello, Lady C., 9-0; Sanvar, 8-12; Whichever, 8-12, Cinclure, 8-12; Nearly, 8-11; Pink Flower, 8-11; Tinker's Fir, 8-11.

The King's horses, Sun Chariot and Big Game are joint top-weights for the handicap for three-year-olds, although Sun Chariot on performance seemed likely to have that position to herself. The leading weights are:—

Sun Chariot, 9-7; Big Game, 9-7; Watling Street, 9-2; Afterthought, 9-1; Hyperides, 8-13; Feberion, 8-12; High Table, 8-12; Ujiji, 8-11; Perfect Peace, 8-11; Light of Day, 8-11; Shahpoor, 8-10; Birikan, 8-10; Rio Tinto, 8-9; Umballa, 8-9.

SALE OF A COW

INTERESTING POINTS RAISED

The question whether or not a Judge can state more than one case in the same matter coming before him was raised in the Supreme Court, consisting of the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Murnaghan, Mr. Justice Geoghegan, Mr. Justice O'Byrne and Mr. Justice Black yesterday.

Messrs. Gavin Low, Ltd., livestock salesmen and auctioneers, Prussia street, Dublin, had processed Mr. William Field, victualler, Lower George's street, Dun Laoghaire, in the Dublin District Court, in February, 1941, for £12 10/-, the amount of a cheque, which had been stopped because, it was stated, a cow that Mr. Field had bought from Messrs. Gavin Low had, on slaughter, been found to be tubercular.

The cow had been sent to Messrs. Gavin Low by the owner for sale in the ordinary course of their business and the fact that it was tubercular was not known to them. The District Justice gave a decree for the sum claimed, and Mr. Field appealed. The Circuit Judge stated a case for the Supreme Court, asking whether, on the true construction of the Public Health Acts, the decree should be reversed and Messrs. Gavin Low's claim dismissed on the ground that the cheque had been given for an illegal consideration. The Supreme Court had answered that the cheque had not been given for an illegal consideration, and when the appeal again came before the Circuit Court, a new point was raised on behalf of Mr. Field, that the cheque had been given for an illegal consideration by reason of the provisions of the Dublin Improvement Acts Amendment Act, 1864.

The Circuit Judge stated a case on this new point, and when it came before the Supreme Court yesterday the Chief Justice asked was there any limit to the number of times a case could be stated by the Circuit Court on the same matter.

Mr. Michael J. Ryan, K.C., for Mr. Field—I think not; in this case it is the same cow and the same cheque, but a different Statute.

Mr. Justice Murnaghan—Has anyone ever heard of two cases being stated in the same proceedings? It is a question of the jurisdiction of the Court to hear two cases stated on the same matter.

Mr. Ryan said that there was nothing in any enactment that would preclude a judge from receiving the assistance of the Supreme Court on a difficult question of law.

The further hearing was adjourned.

NEW SANATORIUM

TEN-YEAR-OLD PROJECT

The site of the proposed new sanatorium, referred to in the Dail last week by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Local Government and Public Health (Dr. Ward), was selected six years ago at Ballyowen, South County Dublin, a reporter was informed yesterday. Dr. Ward stated that it was proposed to equip it with 320 beds, and that the money had been earmarked for the project.

At the inception of the Hospitals' Trust, over ten years ago, when the question of a new sanatorium was raised, it was estimated that it would cost £350,000. A Corporation architect and members of the medical profession went abroad to procure data. On their return they prepared plans, which were submitted to the City Manager, who, in turn, forwarded them to the Local Government Department. Nothing tangible was effected, and a Board of Assessors, composed of well-known architects and doctors, was set up. Again nothing happened, with the exception of making arrangements for a competition for the best plan for a new sanatorium. The questions arise: What would be the estimate to-day, and how many beds would now be required to accommodate the ever-growing number of people suffering from the disease?

In the Dail next week Dr. Ward will be asked for information in regard to the number of tuberculosis cases for which sanatorium treatment was made available during the years 1937-41. When questioned last week Dr. Ward gave only the number of cases notified in Dublin for the years stated.

Four airmen were killed and two others injured when an R.A.F. flying-boat crashed in the straits between Nova Scotia and Cape Breton.—(Reuter.)

NEW NAVAL SITUATION

By Our Military Correspondent.

THE new American initiative in North-West Africa, coupled with the Allied campaign in Egypt, will have for its first effect—and, possibly, its most important one—a marked improvement in their naval situation, mercantile as well as military.

The thesis was often advanced in these notes—and, indeed, it was self-evident—that opening the Mediterranean was a sine qua non of any comprehensive, offensive action by the Allies. Consider, for example, two typical steaming distances of the former route, via Cape of Good Hope—Southampton to Colombo, 10,397 miles; New York to Suez, 12,750. Evidently such journeys were bound to become prohibitive in the long run. They were hopelessly uneconomic, and something had to be done to shorten them. Once the Mediterranean is really opened—i.e., once it is as safe as, say, the Western Approaches—the result will be just the same as if the mercantile marine, plying on the old routes, were doubled or trebled in numbers. This is far better business than building new tonnage, in the present state of raw materials, labour shortages, etc., etc. At all events, the Allies will now be able to breathe much more freely as regards their shipping and what to do with it. As might have been realised, there was no real difficulty in finding shipping for a major expeditionary army, once it was genuinely decided to send such overseas.

What applies to mercantile shipping applies with equal force to men-of-war—more so, indeed. The saving of time will be greater in their case, by reason of their higher average speed. This, however, is merely a business of physical movement. It is desirable to examine whether something of a more distinctly "operational" character could not be brought about under the new conditions obtaining—or, at least, which seem likely to result.

ADRIATIC OFFENSIVE!

An advance by the Allied Navies into the Adriatic would seem to open up the biggest prospect in the offensive sense. This, of course, does not mean anything so fatuous as thrusting battleships, troopships and tankers into that restricted sea. Submarines, aircraft and light surface vessels will do very well, provided they can be backed up by heavier metal. There are several reasons why the Adriatic affords the most promising line of advance: it penetrates deepest into the mainland of Europe; it isolates Italy, except for the Alpine routes; it outflanks the Axis occupation of Greece and Yugoslavia.

With regard to the "aid for Russia" aspect of things the relief afforded is very important. Up to the present there was always a possibility of a strong Italian squadron giving the coup de grace to the Russian Black Sea fleet—whether in the Black Sea or the Ægean mattered not at all. Any such operation is no longer practical politics. It is even likely that German light craft will now be sent overland to Salonika, rather than down the still ice-free Danube to the Black Sea.

ITALIAN WARSHIPS

We have recently heard of Allied torpedo aircraft raiding Taranto, but no mention was made of the presence there of major Italian warships. The probability is that these are at the moment on the western coast of Italy, in some harbour of the Tyrrhenian Sea. They have always the Messina covered way to pass back and forth. In any event, the western side of Italy is much the more important as regards population and development. It is highly probable that the main naval concentration would be made in its defence.

German reaction is very likely to take the form of a drawing back of the submarines—certainly of such as were operating off the south of Africa. These will probably congregate outside the Strait of Gibraltar—where, very likely, they will be reinforced by such Japanese submarines as are in the Atlantic. All this means that the French western ports will take on an even greater importance than before.

It is also quite on the cards that the heavy German surface warships—Tirpitz, Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, and the pocket battleships—may advance into the Atlantic. Such damage as may have been incurred by some of them has presumably been made good, and the lengthening nights and foul weather of winter would favour such sorties.

ALLEGED WOUNDING OF DAUGHTER

CIVIC GUARD CHARGED

Further evidence was taken in the Dublin District Court in the case in which Guard Francis W. Cormack, Comeragh road, Drumnagh, is charged with assaulting, ill-treating and wounding his ten-year-old daughter, Mary, during a period of two years prior to 7th October, 1942.

A neighbour, Mrs. Sarah Byrne, said she was in Cormack's house one day about a year ago when she saw defendant beating the girl. He struck her with his hand on the head and bumped her head on the table. It was a very rough blow. She told him not to be hard on the child.

Eleven-year-old Maureen Penrose said that May Cormack always hurried home from school. One Sunday about three months ago she was in Cormack's house when Mary started to faint. The knitting went wrong and Mrs. Cormack (stepmother) ripped it on her. When her father came in Mary asked him would he like to see her knitting and he took her to get the stick. Mary went out under the stairs and witness heard her father beating her. When Mary came back she was crying and her legs were black and blue. After tea Mary's stepmother slapped her with a stick on the hand, but her father said, "That's not the place to beat her. Hit her on the legs—give it to me." When he got the stick he beat her on the legs. The witness said she did not see Mary do anything wrong that day.

The case was further adjourned until Monday next.

GOVERNMENT NOTICES.

EMERGENCY POWERS (CONTROL OF PRICES) (NO. 155) ORDER, 1942. MAXIMUM PRICES FOR BATTERIES AND ACCUMULATORS.

It has come to the notice of the Minister for Supplies that excessive prices have been charged in some cases for certain Batteries, particularly for those commonly used with battery wireless receivers. The Minister has accordingly made an Order entitled as above fixing the maximum prices which may be charged for certain brands and types of Dry Batteries for wireless receivers, torches, pocket lamps and cycle lamps, and for uncharged accumulators for wireless receivers.

A Schedule of the maximum prices is set out in the Order, which will be published shortly, and will be purchasable directly from the Government Publications Sale Office, 3-4 College street, Dublin, or through any bookseller.

The following maximum prices fixed by the Order for popular types of Batteries and Accumulators are given by way of example:—

I—DRY BATTERIES FOR Maximum WIRELESS RECEIVERS:	Price. £ s. d.
STANDARD 120 VOLT HIGH TENSION BATTERIES: Drydex H 1006; Ever Ready Winner 120; Lucas LHD 4; Dye K. 6, and Siemens' Full O Power H 120	0 15 6
TRIPLE OR HIGH CAPACITY 120 VOLT HIGH TENSION BATTERIES: Drydex H 1015; Drydex H 2015; Ever Ready Duplex Power 120; Lucas LHTD 7, and Siemens' Full O Power V8	1 13 0
II—TORCH, POCKET LAMP AND CYCLE LAMP BATTERIES: LARGE TORCH 2-CELL BATTERIES: Drydex No. 2 T 20; Ever Ready No. 1829; Lucas No. 2 TU 1; Siemens' Full O Power T2; Star T 62, and Betta, Chemico and Home Large Torch 2-cell Batteries	0 1 0
Research No. 2 R 2	0 1 4
STANDARD 3-CELL POCKET LAMP BATTERIES: Drydex F 40; Ever Ready No. 1289; Lucas No. 305 R; Siemens' Full O Power T 3; Star P 2, and Betta, Chemico and Dome Standard 3-cell Pocket Lamp Batteries	0 0 8
Research No. 3 R 32	0 0 10
Research No. 2 R 12	0 1 4
III—ACCUMULATORS (UNCHARGED): Dagenite Type LB; Ever Ready Type G8 45; Exide Type DFG; Lucas C.A.V. Type MGM; Lucas C.A.V. Type 2 NAG 5; Pertrix Type PAC 2 N; Pye Type LP 11, and Siemens' Crystacel Type P 2 A	0 13 6

The Order also makes it an offence to offer for sale (by means of advertisement or circular letter, or by any other means, or in a shop or premises) any Dry Battery for use with a wireless receiver, torch, pocket lamp or cycle lamp, or any Accumulator for use with a wireless receiver, without specifying the name and also the type or number of the Battery or Accumulator.

Purchasers should not pay more than the prices stated in the Order, and should report without delay any instance of attempted overcharging to the Department of Supplies, Ballsbridge, Dublin, and proceedings can be instituted against the offender.

SALVATION ARMY VISITOR

Lieutenant-Commissioner Ranulph M. Astbury, who has just completed a tour of the country, embracing Belfast, Dublin and Cork, is highly satisfied with the work of the Salvation Army social service in Ireland. It is fifteen years since last he visited this country. In September, 1940, he was appointed Principal of the Army International Training College, Denmark Hill, London, and in December, 1941, he became Governor of the Men's Social Work in Great Britain and Ireland, a position which he now holds.

Lieutenant-Commissioner Astbury told an Irish Times reporter that the war had wrought a great spiritual change in England, more people now being interested in religion than formerly. Their young people, he said, now seemed to do a great deal more thinking for themselves than the young people of days gone by.

Possibly one of the most interesting of the Army's many activities outlined by Lieutenant-Commissioner Astbury is their Anti-suicide Bureau in London, to which the police are instructed automatically to refer all cases of attempted suicide. At the request of the British Government, additional social service centres have been opened since the outbreak of war; wrecked seamen have been cared for, and the needs of a great number of men engaged on national service have been served.

ARCHITECTS AND SURVEYORS

The many members of the Architectural and Building Surveyors' Society, and those interested who are living in Eire, will be pleased to know that a branch of the Society has been formed for Eire and Northern Ireland. This Society, which is well known in England, is a great protection and assistance to the profession. The Chairman of the English headquarters is Mr. Frederick Butler, F.,A.B.S.S., who is a member of an old Kilkenny family. The new branch has obtained the services as organising secretary of Mr. Edmund Farrell, of 39 Dawson street, Dublin. Mr. Farrell is well known in building society activities.

PAPER-SAVING

Dublin theatres and cinemas have joined the paper economy drive, and in future are to have their names and other regular features permanently oil-painted on city hoarding sites rented by them. Commercial and display artists estimate a great saving in the already low stocks of the special paper they use. The comparatively narrow strip posters of the future will reduce the number of sheets required from 32 to eight.

The French Fleet

While the forces of the United States, in close collaboration with the British Navy and Air Force, are extending their grip on the North African coast of the Mediterranean, public opinion throughout the world is occupying itself with the problem of the French Fleet. This fleet is a naval force of some consequence. In fact, when the war broke out it was nearly the equivalent of the entire Italian Navy and, with the exception of the losses that it suffered at Mers-el-Kebir, where it came into conflict with the British, it remains virtually intact to-day. Some of its units are in the harbour of Alexandria, where, for most practical purposes, they are interned by the British. Probably other units are at Dakar; but the great bulk of the French Fleet is at Toulon. The two major ships are the Dunquerque and the Strasbourg, both of which are modern battleships. There is another older battleship, the Provence, with a number of modern cruisers, many destroyers, submarines, and auxiliary vessels of various types. This fleet is reported to be in fighting trim, and to have been ready to put to sea for some days past. Naturally enough, when it was announced that the Germans had decided to occupy that part of France which is administered by the Vichy Government, all sorts of rumours were set in circulation concerning the future of the French Fleet. It so happened that Admiral Darlan, Marshal Pétain's right-hand man, and deputy head of the French State, was in Algiers when the Americans arrived. He was entertained by American officers in a fashion befitting his rank and position; but, in view of his post as chief of the French Navy, one may assume that entertained was a euphemism for interned. At all events, Admiral Darlan's presence in North Africa encouraged the rumour-mongers to suggest that the French Fleet was about to sail from Toulon and hand itself over to the Anglo-American Allies. Other rumours fixed its destination at an Italian port; and so the conflicting stories gained fluctuating credence. The fact is that the French Fleet remains at Toulon, and that it has come under the direct orders of Marshal Pétain, who has assumed the authority formerly exercised by Admiral Darlan.

The latter's position is obscure. General Giraud has taken charge of those French forces in North Africa who are supporting the Americans and the British, but it was Admiral Darlan who, although in American hands, gave the order to the garrisons in Algeria to cease fire a few days ago. Whether or not he was acting on the authority of the French Government has not been made clear; but it seems to be certain that he no longer exercises control over the fleet at Toulon. The mere existence of this fleet as a naval force in being has been one of Marshal Pétain's most valuable bargaining counters in all his dealings with the Germans since the fall of France. Time and again the suggestion has been made that the French Fleet was about to be handed over to Herr Hitler; time and again the suggestion has been proved to be baseless. The latest developments have not helped to clarify the position. It seems that the French naval officers at Toulon declared during the present week that they would resist aggression from whatever quarter it might come. The Germans, in consequence of this declaration, decided to treat Toulon as a special zone—an enclave which is not being occupied. So far as can be seen at the moment, therefore—although the situation is changing from hour to hour—the French Fleet will retain its independence, and Toulon will become a little State within a State. It is a curious situation, which only time and the march of events in the Mediterranean will resolve. If the Anglo-American allies gain control of the Middle Sea the position of the French Fleet will become even more important than it is at present. In the meanwhile it is reported that French naval units in North Africa have come into conflict with Anglo-American warships; that they have suffered heavy losses, and that the magnificent battleship, Jean Bart, has been destroyed.

New Clothes for Old

The President of the British Board of Trade has announced that the shortage of clothing is likely to become even more acute in the near future, and he urges everybody to wear all garments as long as possible. It may be in answer to Mr. Dalton's requests that a "make do and mend" exhibition was opened in London recently. The object of the exhibition, it appears, is to show women methods of making their clothes last longer, and also of turning old clothes into new and different garments by the exercise of a little ingenuity. One thing is significant in the account of the mannequin parade which opened the proceedings on the first day: remarkably few of the old clothes mentioned are women's clothes, and remarkably few of the new ones are men's! Features of the display were a "dinky little costume" made from an old dinner-suit, and a "smart black postilion hat" made from a man's silk hat, while a pair of plus-fours made its appearance as a skirt. In the last-mentioned case, there is some excuse for the ingenious housewife. No economical mind can contemplate plus-fours with equanimity even in peace-time; under war conditions it might well appear that there, striding round the golf links, was the raw material for a couple of barrage balloons. As for other garments, however, one feels that the spirit of Britain's manhood will never submit to their abandonment. Private Thomas Atkins may be a steady man and may love his country; but let him once picture to himself his wife reducing his new blue pin-striped suit—his pre-utility suit, with pockets and turn-up and all—to a smart little afternoon dress, and he will be likely to drop his rifle and transfer himself at the double from the parade ground to the first 'bus for Acacia road. The white-collar worker develops a certain affection for his collar, and he may be reluctant to see it turned into a Sunday hat. For the moment, admittedly, most of the men of England have their uniforms, and are in very little need of civilian outfits. Nevertheless, the peace will come; and in the world of peace there will always be a need of Mr. Thomas Atkins and his blue pin-striped suit.

What's in a Name?

"Giving a name," said Carlyle, "is a poetic art," and, indeed, Mr. Shandy (Senior) thought it an art not merely poetic, but weighty with implications of astrological import. There is, sometimes, among parents too slight an appreciation of the importance of a christening. The fashion of the moment dictates the name, and the child bears it throughout his three score years and ten. There is at all times, of course, a solid substratum of the unimaginative, safe Christian names. There are Marys, Johns and Henrys in every generation. With them, however, there are the names that are the product of enthusiasm, rather than of deliberation or pure family tradition. No man could fail to date a Tallulah, a Marina, or a Deanna. They are pinned to their period with a deadly certainty—their age is as obvious as if they carried their birth certificates upon their sleeves. Fashion has made its decree; the proud parents have responded; and the child must suffer the consequences. Great wars are not without their influence. From the last there emerged the Douglases, memorial to their parents' patriotic admiration for Field-Marshal Earl Haig; from the present conflict America has already drawn its crop of Douglas MacArthurs—white, black, red and yellow MacArthurs—Douglas MacArthur Bryant, Douglas MacArthur Schultz, Douglas MacArthur Ping. Even apart from all outside influences, there seem to be mysterious waves of popularity in Christian names, movements inexplicable except by some theory of unanimism. The tendencies are well illustrated by the names which are given to their babies by those most careful of sponsors, the film magnates. Gone are the exotic appellations of a few years ago, the Glamoras and Adorées so beloved of the comic writers. The new star is Ann, Joan, Judy, or just plain Jane. Sophisticated taste shows the same reaction towards "simple" names. Charlotte, Sarah and Clara are stamped as "Victorian"—which convenient label may be affixed to anything dating from before 1914; Barbara had its vogue in the 'twenties; now we have our Pats, Jeans and Junes. If Mr. Shandy's theories as to the influence of a Christian name on destiny were correct, the matter is a serious one; for, if one Tristram could bring a man to ignominy and disaster, might not a million Junes bring a world to war?

CRUISKEEN LAWN

By Myles Na gCopaleen.

SIR MYLES NA gCOPALEEN (the da) was standing in the conservatory in immaculate evening dress, a figure almost kingly against a riot of banksia alba, green tomatoes and Zéphirine Drouhin. The heated air was laiden with the stench of paraffin emulsion, a sign that Jerkins, the head-gardener, was taking precautions against the disorder known as Cuckoo Spit. The dusk was performing its customary intransitive operation of "gathering." In some far tree an owl could be detected coughing

A clink is heard. The grand old man has laid a glass of scotch and soda against the gold-laced patrician teeth and is swallowing the nourishment with the calm of a man well used to it. He is lost in thought. He wishes to go to the library. He has business there. But he remembers that his is the only library (in the true old-fashioned sense) that remains in the whole country. And he knows a thing or two. He fears the worst.

He sighs, puts down the glass and passes from the conservatory. He traverses the old baronial hall, lined with dead Copaleens, each in his theatrical and anachronistic iron panoply. Sir Myles glances with affection at the last of them to be set there—the Hon. Shaughraun na gCopaleen, quondam ace-bottle-man in the southern command of the Black and Tans. Sir Myles passes on, smiling to himself with whimsical grace. He reaches the library and enters.

"I thought as much," he sighs.

Stretched on the floor in a most ugly attitude is a corpse. Sir Myles has already taken up the telephone and asked for a number.

"That you, sergeant? Look here, those dreadful detective stories. Another corpse in the library this evening. Really, you know, too much of a good thing. Fourth this week. No doubt trouble is shortage of libraries. What? A young man, extremely handsome. Curious scar on left cheek. Dressed? Don't be a damn fool. You ought to know he is attired in immaculate evening dress. Do not touch the corpse and leave everything as it is until you get here? What do you take me for—an ignorant fool?"

Sir Myles puts down the instrument testily and pours himself a stiff drink. He sits down sipping it and apparently listening intently for something. Soon three shots are heard some distance away, followed by a scream.

"I thought as much," Sir Myles mutters, "that will be the mysterious little Belgian governess who has been seen in the neighbourhood recently."

He rises wearily and takes a well-worn storm lantern from a cupboard. He lights it and passes with it from the library. He approaches the massive baronial stairway and mounts it. Flight after flight he traverses, the flickering light illaming portrait after portrait of deceased Copaleens. Soon he has reached the cob-webbed spiral stairs that leads to the tower. With agility that belies his advanced years, he grasps the cold iron balustrade and continues the journey upwards. Soon he is out on the platform of the old Norman tower, the icy wind playing on his old world countenance. From a small press he has taken a telescope and his eagle eye is ranging the sea. In the gloom he can make out the shape of a small ship standing in the bay. It is exchanging mysterious light signals with some unknown party ashore.

"I thought as much," Sir Myles sighs, "question of some plans being thieved by international intrigues; obviously the agents of a foreign Power are leaving no stone unturned. Well well well . . ."

The grand old man wearily descends again to the library. He has lifted the telephone and asked for a number.

"Look here, sergeant, I realise I am telling you something you must know, but the corpse has disappeared during my momentary absence from the library."

"I expected as much, Sir Myles."

"Also there was the usual shots and a scream and all that kind of thing."

"Quite, Sir Myles. It is a good job the body has been taken off your hands because I have changed my mind. I have no intention of going out to your place. This once we will let the mystery be solved by the private investigator who will accidentally arrive on the scene. On this occasion we will spare the police the trouble of making mistakes, following dud clues, arresting innocent parties and generally complicating matters."

"I realise how you feel, sergeant. Good night."

Then the grand old man threw away his glass and started using the bottle.

INVENTIONS EXHIBITION

The centrepiece of the Inventions Exhibition in the Mansion House, Dublin, to be officially opened by the Lord Mayor, Alderman P. S. Doyle, T.D., on November 16, at 4 p.m., will be a full-sized aeroplane, kindly lent by Mr. P. W. Kennedy, Leixlip. More than 200 models will be on view. The Exhibition will be open from 9.30 a.m. to 10 p.m. during the week ending November 21, and will be free up to 12.30 p.m. to Dublin's school children who are accompanied by their teachers. Free lectures will be given on aeronautics and films on flight shown every week-day. A prize of five guineas is offered for the school children's essay competition. The Exhibition is being promoted by the National Agricultural and Industrial Development Association.

D.U. FUKIEN MISSION

Dr. Jocelyn Smyly, who has returned recently from occupied China on a repatriation ship, spoke at the annual meeting of the Dublin University Fukien Mission, in Trinity College yesterday, which was presided over by the Vice-Provost, the Rev. R. M. Gwynn, S.F.T.C.D.

He paid tribute to the Dublin University missionary societies. The members of the hospital staff at Japanese-occupied Tsinan, he said, were well treated and were kept very busy, having a record number of patients in 1941. The patients were not turned out of the hospital until ready to leave. The staff were allowed to live in their own homes, and a municipal hospital with Chinese personnel had been opened.

Miss Crabbe, of the Fukien Mission, said that churches there were actively going forward. The war had provided a great appeal to the practical Chinese.

Schools and hospitals were being maintained despite difficulties, and the need of China was the greatest imaginable challenge to the Christian Church. She firmly believed that no storm could destroy the Church of Fukien.

Professor Auchmuty, hon. treas., said that funds had been well maintained. There had been a marked increase in the cost of living in China. The account for missionaries' salaries—£2,122—was over £700 more than that for the previous year. Receipts totalled £2,900, and, with a bank balance of over £1,000, the balance left in the bank would be only a few pounds when the C.M.S. account was paid.

Deaconess Armstrong also spoke.

DUBLIN SCOTS

As the demand for seats at the St. Andrew's Day Festival, to be held by the Dublin Scottish Benevolent Society of St. Andrew, has greatly exceeded the accommodation available, it has been found necessary to close the list.

INTOXICATING LIQUOR BILL

MR. F. T. EASON'S VIEWS

That the Intoxicating Liquor Bill is a retrograde step; that the Minister for Justice, in the bill, has done nothing to solve the bona-fide problem, and that the "long sitter" in public-houses on Sundays has just as much time under the bill as under the old regulations, are the views of the Irish Association for the Prevention of Intemperance, expressed by Mr. F. T. Eason, chairman, to an Irish Times reporter yesterday.

The only period in which drink could not be obtained under the bill was between 11 p.m., or midnight which ever became the closing hour), and 10 a.m., the opening hour. Sunday opening time was increased by one hour (1-2 and 4-7, instead of 2-5). Seven o'clock as a closing time for the public-houses was in use some years ago, said Mr. Eason, and was very objectionable to persons who were going to evening Services at the time that others were being put out of the public-houses. The 4-7 hours gave the "long sitter," whom the Minister wanted to defeat, as much time as ever.

It might be true that the extra hour for bona-fide traffic and the extension of the distance limit might prevent the "mala-fide" drinker from travelling out of the towns to drink a little longer in the county houses, said Mr. Eason, "but I do not believe that it will cure the present breaking or evading of the laws, nor cause to cease the very disgraceful scenes which may be witnessed in our distance-limit places. It seems to be a method by which badly-conducted houses are able to hide behind the more well-conducted houses; in short, a white-washing of the black sheep among publicans. The hour of 11 p.m. is an unreasonable hour to keep open for the sale of drink, and could not possibly be in the interests of sobriety and prosperous family life."

On the clause laying down conditions for the issue of licences to restaurants, Mr. Eason asked why was not the number of licences already in the neighbourhood made a consideration?

OBITUARY

LT.-COLONEL J. G. GILL

We regret to announce the death of Lieutenant-Colonel J. G. Gill (retired), R.A.M.C., C.B.E., D.S.O., which occurred yesterday. Lieutenant-Colonel Gill, who had a long and distinguished Army career, served in the South African War, and also saw service in India and Burma before the Great War, during which he held several important commands, and was for some time Deputy Director of Medical Services in the Guards' Division. He took part in the Afghan War of 1919, in which he was awarded the C.B.E. and D.S.O. for administrative efficiency and conspicuous gallantry respectively. He was the third son of the late H. J. Gill, M.A., of Roebuck House, County Dublin, and married Elizabeth, daughter of the late John Harrington, Brannockstown, County Kildare. Educated at Clongowes and at the Royal College of Surgeons, Lieutenant-Colonel Gill was a brother of the Rev. H. V. Gill, S.J., and uncle of Mr. W. J. Gill, the well-known golfer.

BOYLE MEDAL

At a general meeting of the Royal Dublin Society yesterday, Professor Joseph Doyle, M.A., Professor of Botany, University College, Dublin, was presented with the Boyle Medal in recognition of his work on the reproduction of conifers. Dr. A. W. Conway, President, University College, Dublin, and President of the Royal Dublin Society, made the presentation. A tribute to the work of Professor Doyle was paid by Professor H. H. Dixon, Professor of Botany, Trinity College, Dublin.

Mr. J. Leonard and Mr. R. K. Wright, senior members of the Agriculture Section of the Council, were nominated to fill vacancies as Vice-presidents.

The Boyle Medal was founded in 1899 by the Royal Dublin Society in honour of Robert Boyle, the Irishman, who was a contemporary of Sir Isaac Newton in the founding of the Royal Society, London. Its first recipient was Dr. George Johnstone Stoney, one of the founders of the electronic theory and the actual inventor of the word "electron."

STUDENT CHRISTIAN FEDERATION

The World's Student Christian Federation was discussed last night at a meeting of the Student Christian Movement, held in No. 4 Trinity College, Dublin. Mr. Basil E. Booth presided. Dr. Jocelyn Smyly, recently repatriated from occupied China, spoke of his thirty years' experience of the growth of the International Student Christian Movement, and the Rev. J. R. Boyd, Irish National Secretary, S.C.M., said that the World's Student Christian Federation presented possibilities of a community which was supra-national and drew together different nations and denominations.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,

THURSDAY NIGHT.

THE Earl of Rosebery, Regional Commissioner for Scotland, writing in The Banker, states that after the war there will be an enormous amount of reconstruction and commerce to be started in Northern Europe. "Scotland's position on the map, with aerodromes and the great Port of Glasgow in the west to receive all that America can send over, and our ports of Leith, Dundee and Aberdeen in the east to transmit these goods to those desolate countries," says the Earl, "make Scotland the ideal place for the furtherance of such schemes. If the country is organised and our authorities continue to show that broad view and vision with which they have already commenced their task, I can see no country wherein I would prefer to establish a business or come to work with
